Effect of superstition and astrology on self-esteem , psychological well-being and satisfaction, 120 Days

Research investigates the impact of superstition and astrology on self-esteem, psychological well-being, and life satisfaction. This survey included both married and single people. This study illustrates that self-esteem plays a moderate role by integrating data from reviews, studies and books. 100 married and single persons received online google forms for the study. Intercorrelation between variables is observed in this study. Our findings revealed a robust link between self-esteem, life satisfaction, and psychological well-being.
